CAPT. JOSSELYN WILL SPIN SOME YARNS

Few sen captains have had the in-teresting life of exciting experiences that Captain Josselyn of the bark Nu-uanu has had, and fewer still can tell these experiences in the vivid manner that is his. Practically every time the captain is in port he is rounded up somewhere and started story-telling. Somewhere and started story-telling.

Last year he drew a large crowd to the Y. M. C. A. to hear the story of his shipwreck, a story that is a story.
The Association has again secured Captain Jesselyn for an evening, and all who like to hear a good yarn well spun are invited to come to the Y.
M. C. A. huilding tonight and enjoy M. C. A. building tonight and enjoy the stories, full of real life and salt.

There is not a slow minute with the captain. He has something doing all the time, and not the least interesting feature is his manuer of wise philosophical observations on most every-thing. The talk is open to both men and women, and there is no charge. Come and spend an evening with a story-teller of the first water.

QUIET

By Ernest G. Walker.

(Mail Special to the Advertiser.) WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 14 .- The national capital is recovering from the effects of a strengous week-the most strenuous week it has had for a long, long time-and looking forward with a feeling of some relief toward Christmas and the long holiday recess. For Congress will last hardly more than a week longer before the recess into a new year, made almost imperative from long custom, will be taken.

While there was no one event of transcendent importance during the first six days of the session of Congress, there were numerous happenings in conjunction during that period which gave the city a busy week indeed. The Conservation Congress has been here, as with its influential members agitating ternal improvements. The Presidentelect has been in town and Seneters and members have been occupied in getting talks with him and reaching understandings. They have thronged the parlors of the residence of W. J. Boardman, on Dupont Circle, every day during the hours when Mr. Taft was not presiding over the Red Cross convention or filling other engagements. All these occurrences have attracted many prominent people from different parts of the country to Washington. There have been numerous social events and the city has assumed an activity and a gayety that will not be equalled again in all probability till inauguration comes in early March.

Search After Banquet Orator.

Along with the sessions of numerous ivie bodies there have been many efforts to engage attractive speakers for the winter banquets of many varieties delegations and nearly all have gone to the Capitol to enlist the aid of their

The President and Vice President of the United States were present, as were the President-clect and the Vice President-elect. Hon. W. F. Frear of Honolulu, figured among the guberthe head table.

It was a night of wit and fun-making, in which all the dignitaries unbended and met on a plane of equality with the forty-odd Washington newspaper correspondents comprising the membership of that club. "Take-offs" on Public Officials, The veil is drawn aside only a little, so that the general public catches but a glimpse of those dinners, but there were bright speeches by the President and the President-elect and by numerspicuous developments in political and governmental affairs. But now the days seem tame by com ministration as the next President of the United States. The Rivers and Harbars Congress, the Red Cross Convention, the Conservation Congress and the States of the Medical Conservation Congress and the States of the Medical Conservation Congress and the States of the Medical Conservation Congress and the Medical Conservation Congress and Congress and Conservation Congress and Con of those various organizations have dispersed to their homes. They have had a rare view of Washington, such a view as could hardly happen at the beginning of a session of the Federal Congress more than once in four years and possibly not eftener than once in a decade or a quarter of a century.

President Roosevelt has yet to settle his troubles with the offended Senate and House, but that is a one-ring circus as compared to the many-ring performance that has been in progress. And the days will rapidly slip away to the Christmas holidays, when once more Washington, with its many kaleidoscopic changes, will become as quiet, for a season, as a country village.

After the Calm, the Fight.

Following the reassembling of Congress, of course, will come on the little affair of the President and Congress in the matter of the Secret Service clause of the Message. The President intends to fight the matter to a finish, and the Congressmen are only planning on what they can do to rebuke the has the Rivers and Harbors Congress, Executive for the insinuations made by him that the Congressmen have anyfor a bond issue of $500,000,000 for in- thing to fear from a Secret Service investigation.

Might Lay on the Table.

A half dozen different ways have been suggested for accomplishing this, Some want to vote to lay the Secret Service portion of the message upon the table. That would be taken as indicative of the Congressional displeasure. Others want to pass a resolution declaring that the President's charges have been investigated and that there is nothing in them to warrant the lan-guage he has used. Probably the Senate and the House will both agree upon some such course of action, although special message and attack the record of some Congressmen as he is repre scated as planning to do, it is quite within the probabilities that there would be formal censure of the President.

At any rate a high state of mind exists at the White House and also a high state of mind at the Capitol. The the winter banquets of many varieties in the big cities of the land. Scores of presidents of boards of trade, chambers of commerce, dry goods associations and other organizations, have canvassed not only the membership of Congress but the ranks of the visiting governors and other celebrities for oratorical talent. Some have come with delegations and nearly all have gone Jackson, of whom President Roosevelt is a great admirer. If all the facts about the operations a climax with the annual fall dinner of tative Tawney was one of the foremost the Gridiron Club, all of whose dinners in declaiming against the growth of the big special agents service in several departments, and when this special departments, and when this special agent service was augmented by details of Secret Service men, he argued that it was time to call a halt. When Chief Wilkie was before the appropration committee to explain the appropriations that his Secret Service Bureau needed, Mr. Tawney hauled him over the coals and asked questions that Mr. Wilkie was willing to answer only untorial guests and occupied a seat at be taken down by the stenographer and printed in public document form, as happens with all the appropriation hearings. There was an agreement that Mr. Wilkie should tell all he knew but-that it should not be made public. Versions as to what Mr. Wilkie said differ. Some say he declared the Pres ident had embarrassed him greatly insisting upon Secret Service men doing certain work, but that there was nothing for him to do but to obey or to resign. In any event the appropriations committee voted the restrictions into pressive rendering by a tener soloist the appropriation law as a provise. When the bill got over to the Senate of "The Song That Reached My that provise was struck out by the Senate appropriations committee, of which Mr. Hale, now one of the most insistent for a censure of the President, was acting chairman. However, when the bill went into conference, Mr. Tawney was able to have it restored,

Some of the galehes are yet choked with guava bushes, some of them of great height, but gradually these are disappearing before the charcoal man, who patiently toils alone in the mountains, adds to his pile of charcoal and oceasionally sets out to market the results. Charcoal is in great demand among the Japanese and guava bushes make the best in the market.

The building, however, was not of artistic appearance; the President wanted it torn down, and he proceeded to tear it down. This has led to sarcastic warnings to Congress to beware lest the President some afternoon raze the Capitol to the ground.

Probably the coal heads will prevail and the prospects of a serious breach with President Roosevelt will disapwith President Roosevelt will disappear. That is the prevailing opinion at the Capitol. But before there is a final disposition of the matter there is likely to be spirited debating in Senate and House. Now that the House Republicans have started into the investigation and by that very fact assumed an attitude of disapproval of the President, the Democrats are standing aloof and demanding that the Republicans take the sole responsibility. They say it is not their kettle of fish, notwithstanding the fact that they virtually drove the Republicans into taking formal notice Republicans into taking formal notice of the offensive paragraph. As the recess of Congress for the holidays comes very soon, the matter may be postponed till the New Year.

MRS. A. F. KNUDSEN A DELEGATE FROM HERE

The Women's National Rivers and Harbors Congress, which was lately held at Washington with the parent body, had a delegate from here. The Washington Herald says:

"Mrs. Augustus F. Knudsen, of Kakaha, Territory of Hawaii, who was designated by Governor Walter F. Frear as delegate to the Women's Rivers and Harbors Congress, has traveled 5000 miles in order to show the interest of the people of the Islands in this great movement.

"Mrs. Knudsen's home is in Kauni, the most westerly of the inhabited islands. Her husband has a large ranch and is prominent in Territorial affairs. She is by birth a Californian, and her husband's family came from Norway and Scotland, through New Zealand, to the United States. All these people are intensely patriotic, having high civic ideals."

A.-H. COMPANY WILL NOT RAISE RATES

Chronicle, December 20-The an ouncement that the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company has abandon-ed its proposal to advance rates Jan-mary 1, 1909, marks the first victory in the fight of the shippers of Cali-fornia to defeat the contemplated increases of rail and water freight tariffs.

Shippers have been notified by the traffic officers of the big ocean freight line that no increases of rates will be made, and that instead of advancing its tariffs to meet all new rail rates, as it formerly intended, the company will accent shipment via Tehnantepee at prevailing rates.

Details of the latest proposal of the American-Hawaiian Company are not obtainable. In informing shippers of the abandonment of the contemplated increases of rates the company moved as it thought, secretly, and especially contioned its patrons to avoid making the press cognizant of the new policy.
